30 RUNNERS

Eagerly awaiting the On-On in the pouring rain, we were informed that there were 3 Hash Halts with numerous back-checks, and that the run was approximately 4 1/2 miles (this turned out to be the most accurate statement of late) and that the going was reasonably dry (this turned out to be the least accurate statement of late).

The On-On had been mislaid but was eventually found down the hill from the pub and in TO THE WOODS! It wasn't long before I discovered, being a relative new-comer, that Hashing has little to do with running (really? - Ed.) but is more to do with absent, absent... climbing vertical surfaces. The rope seemed a bit short...was that deliberate? I thought I slid 10 yards in the missionary position. The act of bravery was greeted with an encouraging cheer (that was because your fly's were undone! - Ed). What next - benji jumps?

The On-On through good quality shiggy, a stream, a full flood, some wetlands and past a group of houses. At this point the cry went out...at the time of that station, obviously referring to hares. (Maybe your fly's were still undone! - Ed). However, it was noticeable that the pace of the Lady Hashers (there's no such thing! - Ed) visibly slowed.

The first Hash Halt gave the Ladies the chance to catch up. These followed 2 severe inclines, punctuated by only a couple of well grassed fields, another Hash Halt across minor roads and down a...to a ragged valley where we were welcomed with beer and orange squash.

After a brief respite it was On-On up the valley battling against the raging torrent of what seemed to be a tributary of the Amazon. (I thought an Amazon was a Lady Hasher - Ed) However, we all survived only to endure more shiggy, guelling inclines and blistering tarmac, until eventually we caught a glimpse of the pub through the failing light and drizzle. It was time for a quick run-down and on to the serious business awaiting us in the pub.

- There are a couple of observations to be made of note:
- * MUCKSPREADER when detached from his canine companion, was certainly spreading it around, mainly over the... members of the Hash (so what's new? - Ed) but it was... with vengeance.
- * One or two Pads... seem to be... No hares, no... (What's that mean? MEMBER? - Ed)

Down Downus will be held on:

- * WOT'S' IS FACE, BALD EAGLE & ... Who downed the half pints? (Bleeding Wimps - Ed).
- * TADPOLE for her 20th run.
- * TESTA-ROSSA for her 5th run.

There was a momentary pause in the proceedings as several fellow Hashers suffering in the heat of Madrid. We felt really sorry for them because they were a damn good Has'...
